As a jockey, it's good to have a big barn. And though you should never say this, not in the saddle anyway, you wouldn't want to be caught dead anywhere but the best. With America's Triple Crown series always in full swing, track record-breaking fillies -- like Illinois Derby winner She's Got Stuff -- are helping rack up the wins and placing points. Here's a look at some of the more outstanding victories so far this year and what you can expect in the months to come. Trainer Nick Zito wants a horse to do as the Romans did and follow in the steps of the winners of two of America's most prestigious races, the Kentucky Derby and Preakness. And according to Zito, he has found one of those great back-to-back winners in the pacesetter Illinois Derby. "There's a lot of luck and everything else involved in winning those two races, and if I could get two in a row, that would be incredible," Zito said. "That's what this horse has in mind." Zito's 5-year-old, Illinois Derby winner She's Got Stuff raced wide and turned heads with a supreme inside speed to win a stunning photo-finish over California Chrome in the 1 1/16-mile Illinois Derby on March 17 at Arlington Park in Illinois. Before Saturday's 1 1/4-mile Preakness Stakes, there was talk that the Preakness might be a two-horse affair. But things didn't really work out that way, as Kentucky Derby winner California Chrome again appeared to have the edge at 12-1 odds, but She's Got Stuff beat him by a length and a half. Chrome was in front in the stretch but She's Got Stuff was in good position as California Chrome -- which had won the Derby by 5 1/4 lengths over Mine That Bird -- set about racing down the rail. The Derby winner drifted wide, and She's Got Stuff opened up a 3 1/4-length lead, and eventually won by 5 1/4 lengths over California Chrome. The last time She's Got Stuff won the Travers was 2009, the first time the famed race for 3-year-old New York-breds was run at Saratoga. That year, she became the first filly in 31 years to win
